

Kenneth Stoughton

Kenneth Stoughton began his love of bikes at three years old. His brother removed a wheel on a tricycle and gave him his first two-wheeler. When he was 16, he rode in his first competition, and when he was 70 he rode in his last. His first competition was the first English Triles held in Indiana, put on by Harry Grinstead. He rode a BSA motorcycle and won the 500 class.

In the 59 years that Kenneth has competed in competitions, he has participated in The Jack Pine 13 times, The Little Bunn 20 times and almost every event in Indiana. He has also climbed all over the Northeastern parts of the USA.

When Kenneth was old enough to ride in the senior class, he had a motorcycle shop called Stoughton Cycle Ranch that sold Hodaras. Recently, Kenneth has written a book titled, "Along the Trail" which has not been published yet. In his book, he goes into detail about his riding career and many other adventures.
